Groundbreaking Research Identifies Solutions to Modern Homelessness

NYC Non-profit Hosts Discussion with Co-author of New Book, Identifying Methods to End Homelessness

On Thursday, November 10th, Care For the Homeless (CFH) will host a free digital discussion on findings from In the Midst of Plenty: Homelessness and What to Do About It, with co-author Dr. Jill Khadduri, PhD. Co-written with Vanderbilt University professor, Dr. Marybeth Shinn, PhD, the book seeks to utilize top quality scholarship to identify both the causes of homelessness and solutions that can help end it.

After presenting, Dr. Khadduri will answer questions from a panel of experts, including:

- David Brand, Deputy Editor at City Limits News
- M.A. Dennis, Poet and CFH Consumer Advocate
- Molly Park, First Deputy Commissioner, NYC Department of Homeless Services

Dr. Khadduri will open the floor to questions for all those in attendance after the panel's conclusion.

The discussion begins at 11 a.m. and runs until 1 p.m. Please accept our invitation and click here to register.

On the book, CFH President and CEO, George Nashak, says, "Dr. Jill Khadduri and Dr. Marybeth Shinn's book is the most important book written in the last two decades about homelessness in the United States. These highly informed and thoughtful researchers have provided a data-informed overview of the magnitude and characteristics of homelessness. All of us who work in this field owe the authors a deep debt of gratitude."
